

A prestigious scholarship programme has just been announced by The University of Manchester.

The Faculty of Science and Engineering is offering a number of Dean's Doctoral Scholarship Awards to postgraduate research students with a profile of academic excellence.

The fully funded awards provide financial support for a 3.5 year period and includes tuition fees at the international rate, an annual maintenance stipend equivalent to UKRI minimum stipend rate and an annual £1000 Research Training Support Grant.

The Awards are open to all nationalities and across all research areas and have been created to reward postgraduate research students with a profile of academic excellence. Full details on who is eligible and how to apply can be found here

However, deadlines are tight for people who don't yet have an academic offer to start a PhD programme in September 2021. Interviews will take place in May, so to be in with a chance of making this shortlist, interested candidates should get in touch with the Faculty admissions teams by 12 April 2021 to discuss how to best progress a PhD application in time for the funding deadline.
